Traveling Dog Records announces the new single “My City is a Ghost Town” written and recorded by singer/songwriter Lucciana Costa. This song was inspired by the photo documentary of Detroit by two French photographers Yves Marchand and Romain Meffre. Lucciana has strong ties to Detroit and has witnessed first hand the majestic structures of yesteryear crumbling to ruins.

“I come through the city every couple of weeks and for years these buildings always intrigued me about how life must have been when they were in their glory and how sad it is that they just sit here like some ancient ruins” says Lucciana, “when I saw these amazing photographs first in Time magazine and then on the web I just instantly connected to them.”

This hauntingly beautiful song is both a eulogy and a call to action for all of us living in Detroit and the surrounding areas. While the lyrics of this song could apply to many major cities in this country, it is her love of Detroit that drives this emotional creative work.

Lucciana is a songwriter and performer based in the Detroit area.
